

Overcoming Shame

Living with ADHD can sometimes make you feel like you're falling short, especially when it comes to meeting everyday expectations. Many individuals with ADHD struggle with feelings of shame—those thoughts that tell you you're not good enough or that you're constantly failing. Identifying what shame looks like in your life and confronting it with compassion will help you start to build a more supportive relationship with yourself.

Through creative exercises like drawing your "shame monster" and practicing self-compassion, this worksheet will guide you in exploring feelings of shame and finding healthier ways to cope. Whether you're new to these concepts or have been working on self-compassion for a while, this worksheet is a safe space to begin healing and empowering yourself.

PART 1: Identify Shame

Understanding what shame looks, sounds, and feels like for you is a first step toward healing.

What does shame look like for you?

Is there a particular facial expression or posture you associate with feeling ashamed?

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

What actions or behaviors do you engage in when you feel shame (e.g., withdrawing, avoiding eye contact)?

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

Overcoming Shame

What does shame feel like for you?

How does shame manifest in your body (e.g., tightness in the chest, heaviness, a pit in your stomach)?

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

How does it affect your energy levels (e.g., feeling drained, wanting to hide)?

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

What does shame sound like for you?

How would you describe the “voice” of shame in your mind?

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

PART 2: Draw Your Shame Monster

Drawing your shame monster can help you visualize this emotion and see it as something separate from yourself.

Grab some markers, pencils, stickers, or any other art supplies you have on hand. On the blank space provided, draw what your shame monster looks like. It doesn't need to be a perfect drawing; the goal is to capture how you perceive your shame. Think about what colors, shapes, and features represent your shame. Is it big or small? Does it have a voice? Is it looming or hidden?

PART 3: Journal Questions for Reflection

Journaling can be a powerful tool for processing emotions and shifting your perspective. If journaling feels overwhelming, try setting a timer for maybe 10 minutes, and come back to this part as needed.

What triggers my feelings of shame the most?

---

---

---

---

---

---

How does shame impact my daily life and self-esteem?

---

---

---

---

---

---

What can I do to show myself more compassion when I feel ashamed?

---

---

---

---

---

---

How can I reframe my understanding of ADHD in a way that reduces shame?

---

---

---

---

---

---

PART 4: Practicing Self-Compassion

Shame often thrives when we are too hard on ourselves. Self-compassion is about treating ourselves with the same kindness and understanding that we would offer a friend.

Replace self-critical thoughts with compassionate ones.

Use gentle physical touch to comfort and soothe yourself.

Journal your thoughts and feelings with a focus on self-compassion.

Observe your thoughts and feelings without judgment.

Speak to yourself with the same kindness as you would a friend.

Practice gratitude, focusing on what you appreciate about yourself.

Pamper yourself with some over the top self-care

Surround yourself with people and animals who love you

Protect your well-being by setting boundaries - say no when you need to.
