Healthy boundaries are essential for creating a respectful and secure environment for both you and your child. Clear boundaries help your child understand what is acceptable, build trust, and promote independence, while also giving you the space to maintain your own well-being. This worksheet will guide you through recognizing the need for boundaries, setting them, and enforcing them in a way that fosters a positive relationship with your child.

STEP 1: Visualize Your Boundaries

In the inner circle, write down everything that makes you feel calm, in control, and respected as a parent. This might include specific behaviors or attitudes your child demonstrates that align with your values. In the outer circle, write down anything your child does that makes you feel stressed, uncomfortable, or disrespected. These are areas where boundaries need to be enforced or adjusted.

Outer Circle Example: Whether it's at the park or a playdate, Mia cries and refuses to leave when it's time to go home Whenever I tell her she can't Inner Circle watch TV or use her tablet outside of our set limits, she When I tell her that it's time screams, stomps her feet, and for dinner, she ignores me or says it's unfair says, 'Just one more minute,' even though we've agreed At bedtime, Mia brushes her teeth, puts on her on screen-time rules. pajamas, and gets into bed after a single reminder When I remind Mia to take When I ask her to put her toys away or get ready for dinner, she out the trash or clean her follows through without resisting or needing constant reminders room, she often responds with 'I don't want to' or 'Why When something goes wrong, do I have to do everything?' I appreciate that Mia is able to entertain herself with like spilling juice or forgetting her toys or books her homework, she blames her siblings or even me, instead of taking responsibility After spending time together, Mia shows her appreciation by giving me a hug and saying thank you She sneaks snacks from the pantry, even after we've talked about She doesn't clean up after herself, needing to ask first and her things are scattered everywhere, which makes me feel overwhelmed Whenever I'm talking on the phone or having a conversation with another adult, Mia constantly interrupts and tries to get my attention

When filling out your inner and outer circle, here are some questions to consider:

- What behaviors or routines from my child make me feel calm and respected as a parent?
- What specific actions or attitudes from my child cause me to feel overwhelmed or frustrated?
- Are there any areas where I feel my child consistently crosses boundaries or challenges my authority?
- What behaviors make me feel connected and valued as a parent?
- Are there certain times of day or routines where I feel my boundaries are either respected or pushed?

STEP 2: Identify Areas Where Boundaries Are Needed

Now that you've identified behaviors that cause stress, reflect on the areas where boundaries need to be established or reinforced.

How you set boundaries with your child can make all the difference. It's not just about telling them what they can't do—it's about helping them understand why the boundary is there in the first place. When you explain things calmly and stick to those limits, kids are more likely to respect them because they feel cared for, not controlled.

Ineffective Boundaries

- Vague or abstract language: If the boundary is explained using complex words or unclear concepts, it may confuse the child.
- Inconsistent enforcement: When boundaries change frequently or are not consistently applied, the child struggles to understand the expectation.
- Too many rules at once: Overloading a child with multiple boundaries at once can overwhelm them and make it hard for them to focus on one rule.
- Lack of explanation: Simply telling a child "don't do this" without explaining why the boundary exists makes it harder for them to grasp its importance.
- a frustrated manner, the child might focus more on the parent's emotions than the boundary itself.

Effective Boundaries

- Clear and simple language: Using age-appropriate words and straightforward explanations helps the child easily grasp the boundary.
- Consistency: Setting and enforcing the boundary in the same way each time makes the expectation predictable and understandable.
- One boundary at a time: Focusing on one rule or boundary at a time allows the child to absorb and remember it more effectively.
- Logical reasoning: Explaining the reason behind the boundary helps the child understand why it's important and how it benefits them.
- Calm and supportive delivery: Setting a boundary with a calm tone and positive reinforcement makes it easier for the child to listen and comply.

Use Confident Body Language

Stand or sit up straight, maintain eye contact, and use firm but calm gestures to convey confidence and assertiveness.

Keep Your Tone Calm and Respectful:

Speak calmly and assertively, avoiding raised voices or aggressive tones to maintain a respectful atmosphere.

Be Clear & Set Consequences

Be specific about what behavior you want to change and clearly state what will happen if your boundary is not respected.

Practice Active Listening:

Listen to your child's response without interrupting and acknowledge their perspective while staying firm on your boundary.

STEP 3: Define Specific Boundaries

For each behavior listed in Step 2, define a clear, specific boundary. Remember that boundaries should be easy for both you and your child to understand. Clearly state what behavior is expected and what the consequences will be if the boundary is not respected.
