

Self-Care Inventory

Self-care is more than just a personal routine—it's a crucial part of being the kind of parent you want to be. When you prioritize your well-being through activities that nurture your mind and body, you help yourself stay calm and centered, even during challenging parenting moments. Simple practices like taking a few deep breaths, enjoying a quiet cup of tea, or spending time outdoors can help you recharge, making it easier to respond to your kid's ADHD symptoms with patience and understanding rather than frustration and yelling.

This worksheet will guide you in exploring various self-care activities that can help create a more peaceful home environment. You'll rank each activity on a scale from 1-3 to see how well you're currently engaging in them and then highlight the ones you'd like to do more often. The aim is to help you recognize how self-care can increase your patience and resilience, identify the areas where you're already thriving, and find new ways to support yourself so you can parent your ADHD child with kindness and compassion.

Ranking

- 1 I rarely engage in this, and it is not a regular part of my routine.
- 2 I occasionally engage in this, but it is not consistent.
- 3 I regularly engage in this, and it is a frequent part of my routine.
- ★ I want to do this more frequently.
